

PREFACE

Dear Reader, you are browsing the second issue of the sixth volume of TNTeF: Interdisciplinary eJournal of Gender Studies. The Fall issue is traditionally a selection of the papers we receive or request from authors. For those readers interested in the changes of the popularity of the journal, as well as for historic record and comparative information, the counter of the journal's homepage reads 20.569 — not including direct access to the individual contributions. Thank you, for your interest!

The issue continues our tradition of providing a transnational as well as a diverse representation of achievements in the various feminist scholarly fields of social sciences and humanities. The collection of articles is especially important for most contributions' salient interest in the meaning and reception of feminism in Hungary, predominantly after the system change in 1989.

We recommend in particular the contribution in the TRANSLATION column, Jack Halberstam's reflections on the attack at the gay bar in Orlando, Florida in June 2016 and the Additional Bibliography provided by Louise O. Vasvári at the end of her paper, "Life Writing, Gender, and Trauma." We are grateful for their generosity and commitment to contributing to the TNTeF Readers' professional, political, and activist objectives.

Translations, original studies, and responses to publications in our back issues in line with our Editorial objectives are welcome (tntef.journal@gmail.com). If you would like us to consider your work for review, please contact our Review Editor (eMail). The appropriate copies of publications (books or special journal issues) should be sent to our postal address (Erzsébet Barát, 6722 Szeged, Egyetem u. 2. Hungary).
